Garden City - Feb. 28, 2023
OVERVIEW

Quality is a key driver in health care. With continued competing priorities and increased amounts of quality data requested, how can a difference be made that actually matters to patients? Once a review is completed of all data gathered and where it is reported, how do you dissect the information and pick what to work on next? You must know what is being measured to know where to focus actions. Are your actions truly making an improvement? Efforts made for improvement must be driven by reliable data to identify problems accurately and assist with prioritization of various initiatives. How do you know where to turn for best practices to spark improvement? If these questions have crossed your mind, this is an offering for you.

This training will focus on Medicare Beneficiary Quality Improvement Project measures. Participants will go home with actionable plans for improvement. Topics include:

- Group discussion of all quality data reported and to whom
- Refresher of MBQIP measures and a review of all three MBQIP facility-specific reports
- Break-out groups for deeper dives into challenges, as well as a review of best practices in chosen area of focus
- Development of a Plan-Do-Study-Act cycle to take home and put into action
- Strategies on how hospitals can utilize quality data for improvement

INFORMATION

Presenter – Susan Runyan
Susan Runyan started her own consulting firm in 2016. She primarily assists Critical Access Hospitals with quality improvement activities and programs, along with quality data reporting. Runyan’s background includes more than 14 years in hospital risk and quality management with 30 years overall in a variety of health care roles. She worked for the Kansas Quality Innovation Network-Quality Improvement Organization and the Kansas Hospital Improvement Innovation Network, assisting CAHs, and has been a leader in MBQIP for Kansas CAHs since 2013. Runyan contracts with other state Flex programs to perform workshops, provide education or complete intensive in-person quality program analysis of specific hospitals. She also contracts independently with CAHs to serve as a trainer and resource when new quality directors, abstractors or risk managers are hired.

Runyan has expertise evaluating facility quality programs, leading patient and family engagement projects for both hospitals and clinics, teaching Lean and Plan-Do-Study-Act methodologies, and other performance/quality improvement training. Her clinical background is a paramedic both in the field and in a rural hospital emergency department.
