Is your hospital being underpaid?

Kansas Health Service Corporation is proud to announce a new partnership with Callagy Recovery, a national leader in enforcing fair reimbursement under the federal No Surprises Act.

To kick things off, please join us for this educational webinar at no charge for KHA member hospitals.

Insurers often pay out-of-network claims below fair value, and most hospitals never challenge them. The No Surprises Act gives you the right to. Callagy Recovery files more than 10,000 arbitrations every month and is on track to recover more than $1.5 billion for providers this year alone. In this session, they'll explain how the law works and what it means for your bottom line.

What It Means for Hospitals
The No Surprises Act affects how hospitals bill patients, disclose costs and work with insurance companies. Hospitals must comply with patient notification requirements, billing protections and applicable dispute resolution procedures. The law does not eliminate patient responsibility for deductibles, copayments or coinsurance. Instead, it limits certain unexpected out-of-network charges.

For Kansas hospitals, the law is particularly relevant to emergency departments, physician billing, hospital-based specialists and negotiations with insurance companies.
